HESPERIAN SINKS TRYING TO REACH PORT

Most of the Passengers and Crew of Torpedoed Allan Liner Were Saved—Two Women Died After Being Rescued

BERLIN MAY DISAVOW U-BOAT'S ACT

Germany Still Clings to the Mine Theory, but Passengers Say Liner Was Torpedoed—Washington Now Waits for All the Facts

Amsterdam, Sept. 7.—Germany will disavow the attack on the Allan liner Hesperian if England reports of the circumstances are fully corroborated by the submarine commander, according to a dispatch from Berlin yesterday.

Germany's explanation, the dispatch stated, will be that if a submarine torpedoed the liner without warning it was because the U-boat had left its base before the new instructions were issued by the admiralty.

Only a few brief bulletins from Dutch sources have reached Berlin, the dispatch said. In the absence of more information German officials were reported to be extremely reticent, but they were inclined to doubt the London report that the Hesperian was torpedoed. They said it was quite possible that the liner had encountered one of the mines reported drifting off the southwest coast of Ireland.

London, Sept. 7.—The Allan liner Hesperian sank at 6:45 yesterday morning within a few miles of Queenstown, after Captain Main and a volunteer rescue crew of twenty-five had made a brave flight to bring the crippled ship into port. During the night the Hesperian settled gradually by the head. Daylight showed the decks awash and the liner about to take the final plunge.

The captain and crew were taken off by rescue boats and landed later in Queenstown by the steamer Empress.

The sinking of the Hesperian in deep water probably will prevent an investigation to determine whether the disaster resulted from a submarine's torpedo or from a mine. Passengers and crew assert positively that the vessel was struck by a torpedo, but thus far no statement has been obtained from any one who saw a submarine or a torpedo.

The American embassy is receiving reports from Wesley Frost, American consul at Queenstown, on the question whether warning was given to the liner. Persons so far seen by Mr. Frost state that no warning was given. Captain Main's statement probably will be taken later.

Mr. Frost, the American consul, has been unable to learn of more than two Americans who were on the Hesperian, both members of the crew, and both are reported to have been saved.

From stories told by survivors the detailed account of the disaster is gradually being unfolded. Most of the passengers say there is no doubt the attack was made by a German submarine and some of them say they heard the lookout shout "Submarine on starboard quarter." Thus far no statement has been made by any survivor who saw the submarine or a torpedo.

All agree the Hesperian was struck on the starboard side, between the foremast and the bridge. Lifeboats were launched in the darkness, but without panic. The fourth and fifth boats were lowered unevenly and overturned, the occupants being thrown into the water. Some of them were injured.

A Chronicle dispatch from Queenstown says that Miss Corberry, an elderly passenger, died from shock after being rescued, and that another woman succumbed, a short time after being taken aboard a rescue ship.

A woman in one of the lifeboats stopped a small leak by removing a stocking and stuffing it into the hole. Three Sisters of Mercy were among the last to depart from the Hesperian. One of the passengers asserts that sixty persons were crowded into a lifeboat having a capacity of forty.

Queenstown, Sept. 7.—Wireless reports received by the Allan line state that Capt. Main and the members of the crew of the Hesperian who remained aboard were taken off before the steamer foundered.

The Queenstown agency of the Allan line announced that forty-five first-class passengers, 125 second-class passengers had been accounted for, and that it could not say, at the present time, how many were missing.

The number of men in the crew was given at 250, of whom 250 have been accounted for, not including those who remained on the Hesperian until she went down.

These figures, the agency says, are approximately correct.

About 4,000 sacks of mail went down with the Hesperian.

The point at which the vessel sank is about 160 miles east of Queenstown.

CAUSED BY CARELESSNESS

If you are constipated it is your own fault. It is caused by carelessness and can be corrected by cultivating careful habits.

Diet is of the first importance, then exercise and the use of a laxative until healthful habits are established. Harsh purgatives are harmful and make matters worse but Pinklets, the little pink granules prepared by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., give nature the gentle assistance required and they really do correct constipation. If the laxative you are using is unsatisfactory try Pinklets.

Write for free sample or get a full-size, 25-cent bottle of Pinklets from your own druggist. A booklet on "Constipation, Its Causes and Treatment" will be mailed free on request.
